The Facilitators of Outdoor Learning (FOOL's) Forum is an opportunity to share strategies relating to facilitating outdoor learning. Whether your teaching focus is personal development or outdoor pursuits the forum sessions will be an opportunity for you to share and learn.

In keeping with an experiential approach and to minimise the pressure on presenters, there will be no proceedings or hand-outs. The presenters are not being paid, they will be as interested in learning different strategies as the participants.

A better future—together we can.

Where appropriate the sessions will be conducted by a FOOL at an outdoor learning site (i.e. at a cliff face, high ropes course, on a dam).

The sessions will not be a presentation by one person, they will be a series of tasks or questions geared to help participants to talk and share their approaches to issues such as planning, teaching, facilitation, risk management ,rescues and leader competencies.

The program is flexible to allow for inclusions to meet the needs of participants. Sessions have already been proposed and facilitators have been arranged. Please indicate if there are specific sessions that you would like to participate in. Remember that the facilitator may not have all of the answers. They will draw on their own experience and the collective experience and resources of the group.
